WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

GEORGE T. HAWES et al.,
Plaintiffs,
v.
KABANI & COMPANY, INC., et al.,
Defendants.

Case No. C15-1956RSL

ORDER DENYING MOTION TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO FEDERAL RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE
12(b)(2), 12(b)(3), AND 12(b)(6)

This matter comes before the Court on “Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 12(b)(2), 12(b)(3), and 12(b)(6).” Dkt. # 15. Plaintiffs, shareholders of Washington-headquartered L&L Energy, Inc. (“L&L”), allege that defendants engaged in negligent and intentional misrepresentation, violated Washington state securities laws, and were unjustly enriched in the process of auditing L&L. Defendant Hamid Kabani (“Mr. Kabani”) is a California resident and the managing principal of Kabani & Company, Inc. (“Kabani & Co.”), a California corporation with headquarters in Los Angeles. Together, defendants move to dismiss plaintiffs’ Complaint on the basis that the Court lacks personal jurisdiction, that venue in this district is improper, and that plaintiffs have failed to state a claim against Mr. Kabani. Having reviewed the memoranda, declarations, and exhibits submitted by the parties, the Court finds as follows:

ORDER DENYING MOTION TO DISMISS
FOR LACK OF PERSONAL JURISDICTION,
VENUE, AND FAILURE TO STATE A CLAIM

1       I. Personal Jurisdiction

2       Plaintiffs have the burden of demonstrating that the Court may exercise personal 3 jurisdiction over defendants. In re W. States Wholesale Natural Gas Antitrust Litig., 715 F.3d
 4 716, 741 (9th Cir. 2013). In evaluating defendants' jurisdictional contacts, the Court accepts 5 uncontested allegations in the complaint as true. Menken v. Emm, 503 F.3d 1050, 1056 (9th 6 Cir. 2007). If a jurisdictional fact is disputed, however, plaintiffs cannot rely on the bare 7 allegations of the complaint and must come forward with additional evidence. Marvix Photo, 8 Inc. v. Brand Techs., Inc., 647 F.3d 1218, 1223 (9th Cir. 2011). Conflicts in the evidence 9 provided by the parties must be resolved in plaintiff's favor. Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin 10 Motor Co., 374 F.3d 797, 800 (9th Cir. 2004). Because the Court did not hear testimony or 11 make findings of fact, plaintiffs "need only make a prima facie showing of jurisdiction to 12 withstand a motion to dismiss." Wash. Shoe Co. v. A-Z Sporting Goods, Inc., 704 F.3d 668, 13 671-72 (9th Cir. 2012) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

14       Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(k)(1)(A), federal courts ordinarily follow state law when 15 determining the extent to which they can exercise jurisdiction over a person. Daimler AG v.
 16 Bauman, 134 S. Ct. 746, 753 (2014). The Washington Supreme Court has held that, despite the 17 rather narrow language used in Washington's long-arm statute, RCW 4.28.185, the statute 18 "extends jurisdiction to the limit of federal due process." Shute v. Carnival Cruise Lines, 113 19 Wn.2d 763, 771 (1989). The Court therefore need determine only whether the exercise of 20 jurisdiction comports with federal constitutional requirements. Easter v. Am. W. Fin., 381 F.3d 21 948, 960 (9th Cir. 2004).

22       In order for this Court to constitutionally exercise jurisdiction over non-resident 23 defendants, plaintiffs must show that each defendant had "certain minimum contacts with [the 24 forum] such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and 25 substantial justice." Int'l Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 316 (1945) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Personal jurisdiction may be found on either of two theories: “general jurisdiction” and “specific jurisdiction.” “A court may assert general jurisdiction over foreign (sister-state or foreign-country) corporations to hear any and all claims against them when their affiliations with the State are so ‘continuous and systematic’ as to render them essentially at home in the forum State.” Goodyear Dunlop Tires Operations, S.A. v. Brown, 131 S. Ct. 2846, 2851 (2011) (quoting Int'l Shoe, 326 U.S. at 317). Specific jurisdiction, on the other hand, “focuses on the relationship among the defendant, the forum, and the litigation” and exists when “the defendant’s suit-related conduct [creates] a substantial connection with the forum State.” Walden v. Fiore, 134 S. Ct. 1115, 1121 (2014) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). Both types of jurisdiction are considered below.

A. General Jurisdiction as to Both Defendants

Plaintiffs assert this Court may exercise general jurisdiction over defendants because of defendants’ business relationship with L&L, advertisements posted in magazines with national circulation, and ties to other Washington-based companies. General jurisdiction is an exacting standard and must be based on something more than a defendant’s mere “continuous activity.” Cf. Brand v. Menlove Dodge, 796 F.2d 1070, 1073 (9th Cir. 1986) (collecting cases denying jurisdiction despite considerable contacts). For corporations, “the place of incorporation and principal place of business are paradigm bases for general jurisdiction.” Daimler AG, 134 S. Ct. at 760 (internal marks and citation omitted). Outside those locations, the defendant must have engaged in something more than “a substantial, continuous, and systematic course of business” for a court to exercise general jurisdiction. Id. at 761 (quotation marks and citation omitted).

Based on plaintiffs’ assertions, defendants lack the type of contacts with Washington that would make them “at home” here. Kabani & Co. is a California corporation with its principal place of business in Los Angeles, Dkt. # 1-1 at 3, and Mr. Kabani is a California resident, Dkt. # 16 at 2. It is uncontested that defendants traveled to Washington occasionally over the past several years. Plaintiffs further allege that general jurisdiction is warranted based on defendants' having audited L&L for seven years, advertised nationally their status as a "top 25" auditor, and represented other companies with Washington ties. Dkt. # 24 at 22. These allegations, taken together, fail to demonstrate that defendants have sufficiently extensive connections to Washington to warrant exercise of general jurisdiction. Cf. Helicopteros Nacionales de Columbia, SA v. Hall, 466 U.S. 408, 416 (1984) (rejecting general jurisdiction when defendant's contacts included an in-state contract negotiation, acceptance of checks drawn from a state bank, and purchase of substantial equipment and services from the state). Plaintiffs have failed to make a prima facie showing on this issue.

B. Specific Jurisdiction over Kabani & Co.

Even without general jurisdiction, a court may exercise specific jurisdiction over claims related to the defendant's "minimum contacts" with the forum state. Walden, 134 S. Ct. at 1121 & n.6. A court's specific jurisdiction is limited to cases where there is a sufficient connection between the defendant, the forum, and the cause of action. Helicopteros, 466 U.S. at 413-14. The Ninth Circuit applies a three-prong test when determining whether to exercise specific jurisdiction:

(1) The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate some transaction with the forum or resident thereof; or perform some act by which he purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws;

(2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant's forum-related activities; and

(3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it must be reasonable.

Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d at 800. Under this test, the plaintiff bears the burden of demonstrating the first two factors. The burden then shifts to the defendant to make a

ORDER DENYING MOTION TO DISMISS
FOR LACK OF PERSONAL JURISDICTION,
VENUE, AND FAILURE TO STATE A CLAIM

1 “compelling case” as to why exercise of specific jurisdiction would be unreasonable. Id.

2       1. Purposeful Direction

3       A defendant purposefully directs his actions toward a forum state when his conduct was 4 aimed at the state – for example, by distributing commercial goods or services – even if it 5 originated somewhere else. In purposeful direction cases, Ninth Circuit courts apply a three-part 6 “effects” test: “the defendant allegedly must have (1) committed an intentional act, (2) expressly 7 aimed at the forum state, (3) causing harm that the defendant knows is likely to be suffered in the 8 forum state.” Mavrix Photo, Inc. v. Brand Techs., Inc., 647 F.3d 1218, 1228 (9th Cir. 2011).

9       First, the “intentional act” requirement “refer[s] to an intent to perform an actual, physical 10 act in the real world” as opposed to “an intent to accomplish a result or consequence of that act.”
 11 Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d at 806. There is little question that Kabani & Co. intended to perform 12 physical actions by auditing L&L, a point it concedes. Dkt. # 15 at 10.

13       Second, Kabani & Co.’s intentional, allegedly wrongful acts are relevant only if expressly 14 aimed at the forum state. Picot v. Weston, 780 F.3d 1206, 1214 (9th Cir. 2015). A defendant 15 can expressly aim his actions at a state without committing those acts inside state lines. Dole 16 Food Co. v. Watts, 303 F.3d 1104 (9th Cir. 2002). For that reason, California – the plaintiff’s 17 principal place of business in Dole – had jurisdiction over two European defendants who 18 fraudulently induced their employer (the plaintiff) into implementing a new product distribution 19 system. Id. at 1108. The relevant question is whether the defendant’s acts “were performed for 20 the very purpose of having their consequences felt in the forum state.” Id. at 1112 (internal 21 quotation marks and citation omitted).<sup>1</sup>

22       <sup>1</sup> By contrast, defendants rely too much on Able Fund v. KPMG Accountants, 247 F. App’x 504 23 (5th Cir. 2007). In that case, a Texas district court lacked jurisdiction over foreign corporations alleged 24 to have fraudulently induced foreign investors into investing in an offshore hedge fund. Id. at 505.
 25 Because the defendants’ contact with Texas was limited to gathering information and communicating 26 with their Texas attorneys, the alleged wrongdoing was “wholly unrelated to the forum, and no tort

1       In this case, plaintiffs allege that Kabani & Co. engaged in negligent and intentional
 2 misrepresentation, violated Washington securities law, and was unjustly enriched during its audit 3 of L&L, a company headquartered in Washington. Although Kabani & Co. conducted most of 4 its work in California and China and spent a limited amount of time physically in Washington, 5 physical presence is not a jurisdictional prerequisite. More relevant is the fact that Kabani & 6 Co.'s work was completed for a company headquartered in the forum state, with the company's 7 few trips to Washington made to visit L&L's headquarters. The Ninth Circuit has recognized 8 the unique role a company's principal place of business plays in the specific jurisdiction 9 analysis. Dole Food Co., 303 F.3d at 1112. Because Kabani & Co. knew L&L was 10 headquartered in Washington and directly communicated with decision makers there, its actions 11 were "expressly aimed" at the forum state.

12       Finally, a defendant's actions must cause harm "likely to be suffered" in Washington.
 13 Picot, 780 F.3d at 1214. Economic harm to a corporation can be suffered "'both where the bad 14 acts occurred and where the corporation has its principal place of business.'" Mavrix Photo, Inc.
 15 647 F.3d at 1231 (9th Cir. 2011) (quoting Dole Food Co., 303 F.3d at 1113). Although L&L, 16 not plaintiffs, is the injured corporation, plaintiffs' injuries as shareholders are intrinsically 17 related to L&L's failure. Plaintiffs allege that, but for defendants' improper audit, L&L and its 18 stock could have avoided a precipitous decline in value. Dkt. # 1-1 at 4. Plaintiffs also allege 19 that they relied on defendants' audit and either would not have purchased an interest in L&L or 20 would have previously sold their interest had the audit been properly completed. Dkt. # 1-1 at 21 11.

22       Economic harm is likely to result from a factually incorrect audit, especially when that 23 audit overstates a company's financial health. An accounting firm that knowingly or negligently 24

25 [was] alleged to have been committed in whole or part in [that] state." Id. at 506.

26 ORDER DENYING MOTION TO DISMISS
 FOR LACK OF PERSONAL JURISDICTION,
 VENUE, AND FAILURE TO STATE A CLAIM

1 produces an incorrect audit should anticipate financial implications for the company and its 2 shareholders. Defendants gloss over that economic reality by suggesting there is no “evidence 3 that Defendants knew harm was likely to occur in Washington.” Dkt. # 15 at 10. If the 4 defendants’ misconduct occurred as alleged, the harm would be felt as acutely at L&L’s 5 Washington headquarters as anywhere else. Defendants’ theory that “[a]ny harm suffered was 6 likely suffered where Plaintiffs reside or do business-in New York, Delaware, and Florida” 7 offers no help either. It seems particularly unlikely that a California accounting firm, auditing a 8 Washington company, could foresee suit in Florida. If defendants are subject to specific 9 jurisdiction anywhere, that place is Washington.

10 2. Arising Out Of

11 A defendant who has purposefully directed himself toward a forum state exposes himself 12 only to claims that arise out of or relate to his forum-related activities. To determine whether the 13 claims at issue arose from a defendant’s forum-related conduct, the Ninth Circuit applies a “but 14 for” test. Menken v. Emm, 503 F.3d 1050, 1058 (9th Cir. 2007). The plaintiffs in this case must 15 show that they would have avoided injury but for the defendants’ improperly conducted audits.
16 See Ballard v. Savage, 65 F.3d 1495, 1500 (1995).

17 The parties do not dispute the causal relationship between Kabani & Co.’s alleged 18 misconduct and plaintiffs’ injuries – indeed, defendants do not address this prong at all.
19 Plaintiffs assert they believed L&L to be in good financial condition on the basis of disclosures 20 made by L&L and endorsed by Kabani & Co. See, e.g., Dkt. # 1-1 at 12. Had Kabani & Co.’s 21 audits revealed that many assets claimed by L&L did not actually exist, plaintiffs allege they 22 would not have invested in the company or would have sold their shares earlier. Dkt. # 1-1 at 14.
23 Plaintiffs’ uncontested assertion that they would have not been injured but for defendants’ 24 inaccurate audit satisfies the “arising out of” requirement.

1                   3. Reasonableness

2       When a plaintiff establishes the first two jurisdictional elements, a defendant may rebut 3 with a “compelling case” that exercise of jurisdiction is not reasonable. Menken, 503 F.3d at 4 1057. Of the seven reasonableness factors set forth in CE Distribution, LLC v. New Sensor 5 Corp., 380 F.3d 1107, 1112 (9th Cir. 2004), the most relevant to this case are: the extent of the 6 defendants’ purposeful interjection into the forum state’s affairs; the burden on the defendant of 7 defending in the forum; and the forum state’s interest in adjudicating the dispute.<sup>2</sup> After 8 considering these factors, the Court finds defendants’ case insufficiently compelling.

9       As discussed above, Kabani & Co. continuously interjected itself into the forum state by 10 performing a substantial amount of work for a client headquartered here. Kabani & Co.
 11 appropriately concedes that a claim flowing from that work does not conflict with their home 12 state’s (California’s) sovereignty. Dkt. # 15 at 13. Further, although defendants suggest New 13 York may provide a more appropriate forum because of ongoing, related litigation there, id. at 14 13-14, that argument cuts against several other reasonableness factors. The alleged injury was 15 felt no more strongly in New York – admittedly the home state for two plaintiffs – than in 16 Washington: the plaintiffs’ ownership interest was over a Washington company and has no 17 relationship to New York. The physical location of that ownership interest also weighs on the 18 forum state’s interest in resolving this dispute. In addition, Washington’s proximity to 19 defendants’ home state makes it a more convenient forum than the plaintiffs’ home states, New 20 York and Florida. Finally, although the parties dispute Washington’s efficiency as a forum, 21 compare Dkt. # 15 at 13 (“No witnesses or evidence are located in Washington.”), with Dkt. #

23                   <sup>2</sup> The remaining factors are: the extent of conflict with the sovereignty of the defendants’ state; 24 the most efficient judicial resolution of the controversy; the importance of the forum to the plaintiff’s 25 interest in convenient and effective relief; and the existence of an alternative forum. CE Distribution, LLC, 380 F.3d at 1112.

1 24 at 17 (“Plaintiffs believe that more evidence and witnesses exist in Washington than in any 2 other state.”), conflicts resolve in plaintiffs’ favor. Schwarzenegger 374 F.3d at 800. Taken 3 together, these factors do not weigh heavily enough in defendants’ favor to overcome the 4 presumption in favor of this Court’s jurisdiction.

5 C. Specific Jurisdiction over Mr. Kabani

6 Personal jurisdiction over Kabani & Co. does not automatically confer jurisdiction over 7 Mr. Kabani. As in the liability context, the corporate form provides some protection for its 8 employees for jurisdictional purposes. Davis v. Metro Prods., Inc., 885 F.2d 515, 520 (9th Cir.
 9 1989). Under the fiduciary shield doctrine, “[a] person’s mere association with a corporation 10 that causes injury in the forum state is not sufficient in itself to permit that forum to assert 11 jurisdiction over the person.” Id. Rather, jurisdiction over an individual’s work-related 12 activities has been interpreted to be a function of both constitutional due process and state law 13 requirements. In Calder v. Jones, 465 U.S. 783 (1984), the Supreme Court applied a due process 14 analysis, stating that regardless of their status as employees, “[e]ach defendant’s contacts with 15 the forum State must be assessed individually.” Id. at 791. Applying Calder, the Ninth Circuit 16 has looked first to a state’s interpretation of its own long-arm statute, and when appropriate to 17 the limits of federal due process. Davis, 885 F.2d at 522. Following both Calder and Davis, 18 Washington courts have held that because a corporation’s actions cannot be imputed to its 19 employees, “each defendant’s contacts with the forum State must be assessed individually.”
Failla v. FixtureOne Corp., 181 Wn.2d 642, 651 (2014) (internal marks and citation omitted).
 Because Washington’s long-arm statute applies coextensively with federal due process, Shute, 113 Wn.2d at 771, the appropriate analysis for this Court’s personal jurisdiction over Mr. Kabani is the same minimum contacts analysis that applied to Kabani & Co. Cf. Davis 885 F.2d at 522 (9th Cir. 1989) (concluding that because Arizona’s long-arm statute extends to the limits of 24 constitutional due process, the statute “allow[s] assertion of personal jurisdiction over officers of 25

26 ORDER DENYING MOTION TO DISMISS
 FOR LACK OF PERSONAL JURISDICTION,
 VENUE, AND FAILURE TO STATE A CLAIM

1 a corporation as long as the court finds those officers to have sufficient minimum contacts with 2 Arizona").

3 Defendants' briefing on this Court's jurisdiction over Mr. Kabani is relatively sparse.
 4 Defendants correctly argue that the fiduciary shield doctrine prevents this Court from exercising 5 jurisdiction over Mr. Kabani simply because of his employment with Kabani & Co. Dkt. # 15 at 6 15. Missing, however, are assertions that refute facts alleged by plaintiffs. Although plaintiffs' 7 complaint refers in some places to Kabani & Co. alone and in others to "Defendants," meaning 8 both Mr. Kabani and Kabani & Co., the allegations as a whole implicate both the man and the 9 company. See, e.g., Dkt. # 1-1 at 2 ("This lawsuit arises out of Defendants' repeated failures to 10 competently perform their responsibilities."); id. at 5 ("In August 2009, Defendants issued an 11 audit report . . . ."); id. ("Defendants consented to L&L's use of the 2009 Audit Report in L&L's 12 SEC filings."). It is not disputed that Mr. Kabani traveled to Washington on two occasions in 13 relation to L&L's audit, Dkt. # 16 at 2-3, and defendants do not otherwise suggest that Mr.
 14 Kabani was uninvolved the audit process.

15 If plaintiffs' factual allegations are uncontested, those allegations are taken as true.
 16 Although Mr. Kabani had less physical contact with the forum state than Kabani & Co., physical 17 presence is not a prerequisite for this Court to exercise jurisdiction over him. Mr. Kabani's 18 involvement in the audit, including his travel to Washington and his signature on at least one of 19 the audit reports at issue, Dkt. # 27 at 11, created sufficient minimum contacts with Washington 20 to satisfy the requirements outlined above. For the same reasons discussed with respect to 21 Kabani & Co., this Court has jurisdiction over Mr. Kabani.

22 II. Failure to State a Claim Against Mr. Kabani

23 In addition to their challenges to jurisdiction and venue, defendants move to dismiss all 24 claims against Mr. Kabani under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). The question on a motion to dismiss 25 is whether the facts alleged in the complaint sufficiently state a "plausible" ground for relief.

1     Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007). All well-pleaded allegations of material 2 fact in the complaint are accepted as true and are construed in the light most favorable to the 3 non-moving party. Manzarek v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 519 F.3d 1025, 1031 (9th Cir.
 4 2008). “Dismissal is proper only where there is no cognizable legal theory or an absence of 5 sufficient facts alleged to support a cognizable legal theory.” Taylor v. Yee, 780 F.3d 928, 935 6 (9th Cir. 2015) (internal citation omitted).

7       Defendants assert that plaintiffs’ complaint fails to state a claim for piercing the corporate 8 veil and thus all claims against Mr. Kabani should be dismissed. Although the corporate form 9 protects shareholders from personal liability for corporate debts, Bd. of Trustees of Mill Cabinet 10 Pension Trust Fund for N. Cal. v. Valley Cabinet & Mfg. Co., 877 F.2d 769, 772 (9th Cir. 1989), 11 it does not protect a company’s employees from liability for their own actions. Rather, plaintiffs 12 correctly assert that a high-ranking officer like Mr. Kabani “is, in general, personally liable for 13 all torts which he authorizes or directs or in which he participates, notwithstanding that he acted 14 as an agent of the corporation and not on his own behalf.” Transgo, Inc. v. Ajac Transmission 15 Parts Corp., 768 F.2d 1001, 1021 (9th Cir. 1985) (quotation marks and citation omitted). An 16 employee cannot hide behind the corporate form after he participates in an alleged tort. Coastal 17 Abstract Serv., Inc. v. First Am. Title Ins. Co., 173 F.3d 725, 734 (9th Cir. 1999).

18       Plaintiffs’ complaint alleges sufficient facts to plausibly implicate Mr. Kabani on the 19 basis of his own actions. As discussed above in reference to this Court’s jurisdiction, the 20 complaint asserts in several locations that both Mr. Kabani and Kabani & Co. participated in the 21 L&L audit and that both parties approved the use of that audit in L&L’s securities filings. Dkt. # 22 1-1 at 5, 10. Mr. Kabani’s alleged participation in the audit process means that he took part in 23 the wrongdoing that occurred. The corporate shield provides Mr. Kabani no protection from 24 liability as an independent actor, including actions taken within the scope of his employment.
 25 Viewed in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, these allegations state a plausible claim for the requested relief.

26 ORDER DENYING MOTION TO DISMISS
 FOR LACK OF PERSONAL JURISDICTION,
 VENUE, AND FAILURE TO STATE A CLAIM

III. Venue

Defendants' final argument is that venue is improper in this district under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) because defendants do not reside here, none of the events giving rise to this action occurred in Washington, and defendants are not subject to personal jurisdiction in this district. With respect to defendant Kabani & Co., however, "a defendant that is a corporation shall be deemed to reside in any judicial district in which it is subject to personal jurisdiction at the time the action is commenced." 28 U.S.C. § 1391(c). Because the Court has the power to exercise personal jurisdiction over defendant Kabani & Co., that defendant "resides" in this district and venue is proper.

With respect to Mr. Kabani, venue here is appropriate if “a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claim occurred, or a substantial part of property that is the subject of the action is situated” in this district.<sup>3</sup> 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(2). “[T]he substantiality of the operative events is determined by assessment of their ramifications for efficient conduct of the suit,” Myers v. Bennett Law Offices, 238 F.3d 1068, 1076 (9th Cir. 2001) (citation omitted), and can be “measured by considering the nexus between the events and the nature of the claims.” Lee v. Corr. Corp. of Am., 525 F. Supp. 2d 1238, 1241 (D. Haw. 2007) (citation omitted). Other circuits look to whether “significant events or omissions material to the plaintiff’s claim . . . have occurred in the district in question, even if other material events occurred elsewhere.” Gulf Ins. Co. v. Glasbrenner, 417 F.3d 353, 357 (2d Cir. 2005). On that basis, the court in Samson Tug & Barge Co. v. Koziol, 869 F. Supp. 2d 100 (D. Alaska 2012), found venue appropriate when an Alaska corporation was allegedly injured by Californian and Nevadan defendants’ breach of contract because the plaintiff’s economic injury was felt in <sup>3</sup> The other sub-parts of 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) – location of defendant’s residence or availability of other venues – do not apply in this situation.

1 Alaska. In Xcentric Ventures LLC v. Borodkin, 2012 WL 692976 (D. Ariz. Mar. 1, 2012), venue
2 was appropriate in Arizona district court because, even though the subject of the lawsuit 3 occurred in California, the defendants' contact with Arizona included phone calls, letters, and in-4 person visits.

5 In this case, plaintiffs' complaint alleges that the audit reports compiled by both 6 defendants between 2009 and 2013 were addressed to L&L, whose headquarters was in 7 Washington. Mr. Kabani also traveled to Washington on two occasions. Although these alleged 8 contacts are sparser than in the cases cited above, there remains a clear connection between Mr.
9 Kabani's actions that occurred in Washington and plaintiffs' claims. The source of those 10 injuries – the false audit reports – is alleged to have been sent by Mr. Kabani, addressed to L&L, 11 in five successive years. These audit reports make up a significant element of the disputes at 12 issue, and their delivery to L&L is relevant even if the information contained was collected 13 elsewhere. Finally, it is clear that economic injury occurs in Washington when a company 14 headquartered here collapses. For the foregoing reasons, venue in this district is proper.

15 Based on the reasons discussed, defendants' motion for lack of jurisdiction, failure to
